When Face Shields Are a GO

Research shows that more than 90 percent of eye injuries that happened to workers who were wearing eye protection were the result of flying particles or spray that entered around or under the protective eyewear. Face shields, or closed goggles could have prevented such injuries or made them less severe. Always check the appropriateness and fit of safety eyewear.

THESE ARE NOT YOUR FATHER'S GOGGLES

Vader Combo is protection for today: anti-fog, sleek-fitting, compliance-inspiring comfort.

According to OSHA, face shields alone do not protect employees from impact hazards. Face shields must be used in combination with safety goggles or spectacles to protect against impact injuries. Until now, wearers had to make do with assemblies that attached to hard hats or to separate harnesses. Wide gaps between the shield and the face allowed for the requisite eye protection — but those gaps left workers' skin exposed, particularly in applications where spray-back, sparks, or chips can be flying.

Vader Combo solves the problem. Our Vader D3-rated splash goggle is merged with our Vader face shield, which covers the rest of the face more closely than conventional shields — and it contours naturally to provide sleek-fitting coverage. And the goggles feature our BK-Anti-FOG protection — crushing the European EN 166/168 antifog standard by 15 times!
